

STIPERSTONES

High up where the buzzards fly and cry.

We look out for the Seven Whistlers: six birds whirling and soaring.

They seek their seventh since time began, before the glaciers released these stones from their icy grip.

Should they find their seventh bird.....then the world will end.

I've been here for family walks since I was little,
now I take my own children up for the views.

You can walk for miles, you feel rejuvenated.

Stepping on history.

Threading the past through modern life.

I remember things from my childhood.

There are fabulous views
from all angles.

It's a day out.

And the quiet.